JAM IN LAMPASAS AFTER TOUR

John Arthur Martinez was a last minute show-up, but eager nonetheless as he came to Lampasas Radio's weekly Texas Music show last night at the AmVets club. John Arthur arrived back in Texas about midnight Wednesday morning from a tour that ran through the northeast and finished in D.C., but it was hardly noticeable other than a couple of off-stage yawns. He put on his usual great performance and few could argue that he is probably the most capable single-guy-on-a-stool-with-a-guitar in the business. This excellent player always does flawless vocals and his banter and connection with the audience is to be envied by most musicians. Not that he doesn't have a great band puts on a super full show...but it's not all of them that can hold an audience when they're doing a one-man show—he can!

The other half of last night's show was Texas singer Clint Martin from Leesville? Texas. How many knew there was such a place? Clint has been performing on-stage for San Antonio venues and has recently had some songs climbing up the music charts. Clint brought an Austin picker, Randy Barnett, with him and they did a great job last night.

Coming up? Next Wednesday we'll have a couple of the pro's from the Texas music industry on stage as Pauline Reese and Django Walker grace our free acoustic stage show. Then, on Saturday, Feb. 6th, what we consider one of the hottest bands on the Texas scene will be at Amvets for a dance. The Tejas Brothers will be here. For those than haven't picked up on the name yet, they're the harmonizing new group that has the accordion, stand-up bass, "Texas Tornadoes/Freddy Fender" sound, and their big radio single is a beautiful thing that wails out "Love me or leave me alone."

Tickets are now on sale for the show at Amvets and at Lampasas Radio. Seating is limited and those who want tickets and a table should probably get them now--$10 each for a refreshingly different band and sound.
